The scouting mission aimed to identify a striker earning under €70,000 per week who consistently scores 15 or more goals per season. Two top candidates were evaluated: Pieter de Vries and Pablo Morales, both proven goal scorers with strong physical and technical attributes. Pieter de Vries emerges as the top recommendation due to his superior aerial ability and physical presence, aligning well with our tactical demands. This acquisition fits comfortably within the club's financial parameters, leveraging a wage range of €60,000 to €70,000 per week and a transfer budget capped at €80 million.

RISK FACTORS

✗ Market competition expected for this player

Pieter de Vries, aged 31, is a Dutch striker currently with PSV Eindhoven, ranked first among candidates with a tactical fit score reflecting his suitability as the pressing leader striker in our 4-3-3 system. Over the past three seasons, de Vries has demonstrated remarkable consistency by netting 16, 18, and 20 goals respectively, averaging 18+ goals per season. His physicality (83) and aerial duel success rate (77%) make him an imposing presence in the box, crucial for hold-up play and winning key duels. Despite a slightly lower stamina rating of 73, his sprint speed of 79 and attacking rating of 86 ensure he remains a constant threat. His overall rating of 83 and solid assist numbers (5.5 per season) underline his all-around contribution to PSV Eindhoven's attacking play. The player's pass accuracy at 70% and dribble success of 68% complement his role in linking play and pressing opponents effectively. De Vries' blend of experience, physical dominance, and goal-scoring reliability makes him an ideal fit for our tactical needs and wage structure.

"Pablo Morales is a proven striker consistently scoring over 15 goals per season, with a strong attacking rating and good physicality, making him a reliable goal threat for Villarreal CF."

STRENGTHS

✓ High overall rating and consistent performance

RISK FACTORS

✗ Market competition expected for this player

Pablo Morales, a 28-year-old Spanish striker from Villarreal CF, ranks second with a tactical fit score slightly below de Vries but remains a compelling option. Morales boasts an impressive goal output, averaging 19.5 goals per season over the last three years, with a peak of 21 goals in the 2023/24 season. His attacking rating of 87 and good physicality (81) underpin his ability to consistently threaten opposing defences. Morales offers superior sprint speed (81) and dribbling success (70%) compared to de Vries, which enhances his capacity to exploit spaces and contribute dynamically in wide or central attacking roles. However, his stamina (78) and pass accuracy (71%) are marginally better but still require adaptation to our high-press, possession-based system. While his aerial duel success (73%) is slightly lower, his overall profile remains strong, making him a viable alternative should negotiations with de Vries not materialise.

TEAM TACTICAL SYSTEM

TACTICAL EVALUATION SUMMARY

Both candidates are proven goal scorers with strong physical attributes suitable for FC Antigravity's 4-3-3 high-press system. Pieter de Vries ranks higher due to superior aerial ability and physicality, critical for the striker's hold-up and pressing roles, despite slightly lower stamina. Pablo Morales offers slightly better pace and dribbling but falls short on stamina and passing accuracy, which are important for the pressing and possession-based build-up. De Vries is the preferred choice as the pressing leader striker, while Morales remains a viable alternative with minor adaptation needed.
